Presentation of Artworks

How should I frame my artwork?

It is entirely up to you how you would like to frame your artwork. Previous judging panels have commented that simple frames which enhance the qualities of the artwork are better than overly decorative frames.

My painting is a stretched canvas. Does it need to be framed?

No. However, the artwork should be professionally presented, so please check for a warped stretcher or a slack or torn canvas.

Can I assemble my own three-dimensional artwork?

We ask that all three-dimensional artworks requiring assembly be accompanied with installation notes and a photograph of the artwork. You may also discuss the assembly of your artwork with an art handler when you deliver the artwork.

Do I need to provide a plinth?

No. Blacktown Arts has a collection of plinths that will be used for the exhibition.

Can I install my own artwork?

No. We employ professional art handlers who install all artworks on behalf of the artists.

My artwork needs power, can this be arranged?

Yes. However, power points are limited and this may affect where your artwork is installed.

My artwork needs to hang from the ceiling. Is this acceptable?

We are unable to suspend or hang artwork from the gallery ceiling.

What are D-rings? And do I need them?

A D-ring is a small metal ring that is shaped like the letter D.

D-rings are attached to two-dimensional artworks, one on either side, so the artwork can be hung from these points.

You do not need D-rings if your artwork has a synthetic cord on the back.

If your artwork is a stretched canvas on a timber stretcher, it can be hung from the stretcher.
